Don't Talk to Strangers

A new scam is making the rounds that starts with what looks like an innocent mistake. You receive a text from an unknown number asking something friendly like, “Are we still on for dinner?” Your first instinct may be to reply and let them know they have the wrong number.

Unfortunately, that message wasn't an accident.

Cybercriminals send these “wrong number” texts on purpose to start a conversation. If you reply, they continue messaging you to build trust and create a friendly connection. Over time, the conversation may shift toward money — asking for gift cards, encouraging you to invest in
