Unexpected Charge

Have you ever seen a full-screen warning claiming your Apple, Amazon, or bank account was used for a suspicious purchase? These alerts are often scams designed to trick you into calling a fake support number.

If you call, scammers may ask for personal information, login credentials, or even payment to resolve a problem that doesn't exist.

Follow these tips to avoid similar scams:

- Never call a phone number that appears in an unexpected alert on your screen. Instead, go to the organization's official website to find the support number.
- If an alert claims you were charged, sign in to your bank's website directly to review your recent transactions.
- Always stop and think before you act!
